THE SCHOOL OF CITIZEN PARTICIPATION

The Winter School of the Institut du Nouveau Monde (INM) is a three-day event which allows youth to develop their civic competences by experimenting with various forms of citizen participation. It's also an event designed to gather many important actors of society. You will meet other motivated participants, public figures, artists, journalists, politicians and researchers with whom you can share ideas. It is a dynamic and fun event designed for the youth !

FUTURE CLIMATE, THE WINTER SCHOOL'S 11TH EDITION

This year, the Institut du Nouveau Monde (INM) offers Future Climate; a special Winter School edition concerning environmental issues.

Issues related to environmental protection, biodiversity, climate change, energy transition, and sustainable mobility are at the heart of young quebecers' concerns. The scientific community agrees that an increase of the average temperature of more than 1.5°C would have disastrous consequences : heat waves, floodings, drinking water shortages, massive population displacement ... Our planet is overheating and urgent action is needed !

What does the future hold for our climate ? How will population displacement, and an increase in cultural, linguistic and economic differences affect our ability to live together ?

Future Climate, aims to promote solutions for an ecological, economical, social and cultural transition ! Civic engagement, green technologies, changes in our living habits, international solidarity, reform of public policies... By looking ahead while taking concrete actions, we will move towards a greener, more sustainable and inclusive future !

PROFILES

By choosing a profile during the Winter School, you have the opportunity to experience a form of civic engagement directly related to your interests. In all profiles, you will use your experience, your knowledge and your ideas to find solutions to societal issues.
